

Official Invite to

LECCIBG 1.0

Featuring The First Annual
Xand Pool Tournament

Attendees will get free cigars, discounted drinks,
free swag (for the first 100), and a chance to play for a $250 gift card to amazon.com
and the right to brag to their friends

Sponsored by:

Monday, November 12 • Event Begins 9pm, Tournament at 9:30pm
Diamond Billiards • 5890 South Virginia Street (right down the block from the show)

Question: What is LECCIBG?

Answer: The Ligon/Eadline Cigar and Cognac
Invitational Beowulf Gathering

The LECCIBG is a fine tradition started by Walt Ligon and Doug Eadline at the Extreme Linux Developers Forum in February 2000. We have a cigar, a glass of cognac, and plot world domination through Beowulf technology. Well, we also talk about other stuff too. This is the Tenth LEC-IBG, hence LECCIBG 1.0. And now for some Q&A

Who can attend?

Anyone who wants to.

Then why is it “Invitational”?

Because you can only come if you are invited. You are invited. Everyone is invited.

What if I do not like Cigars?

Drink cognac.

What if I do not like Cognac?

Smoke a cigar.

What if I do not like Cognac or Cigars?

There is always beer for the less sophisticated.

Is it free?

Are you kidding?

Do you have rules?

Rules of a LECCIBG:

1. A LECCIBG can be held at any time. At most one person is required unless you plan a null-LECCIBG in which you are the only invited person, but do not show up. This is not to be confused with and non-LECCIBG in rule 3.

2. Anyone can hold a LECCIBG — we’re open source. Doug and Walt do not need to be present. However, their name should be chanted at least once during the LECCIBG. At most major HPC/Beowulf/Linux Events there may be a LECCIBG. This event may be announced on Cluster Monkey.

3. There is no protocol except that at least one cigar should be smoked and one glass of cognac should be consumed. Otherwise the event is a non-LECCIBG which is not to be confused with a null-LECCIBG in Rule 1. Beer or any other beverage of choice may be substituted for Cognac.

4. Discussion should be limited to world domination through Beowulf clusters and any other topic that seems important.

Who are those people on the front smoking cigars?

Walt and Doug. We are not sure who the other person is.